nal: The announcement that the queen has consented to the marriage of Princess Louise, eldest daughter of the Prince of Wales, to the Earl of Fife is the principal social topic of the week. Every one is pleased that the future Princess Royal of Great Britain and Ireland is not to fall to the lot of some needy German princeling.

Praise From an Editor.

Mr. F. J. Smith, editor of the Fort Aber-

the Duke of Portland.

Lord Fife is forty years old and the Princess twenty-two. He has always been a great friend of the Prince of Wales and a persona grata with the Queen. Curiously enough he has a tinge of royal blood in his veins. Lady Elizabeth Fitz-Clarence, one of the natural daughters of William IV and Mrs. Jordan, the celebrated actress, married the Earl of Erroll and was the grandmother of Lord Fife.

family name to be trailed in the mud.

Unfortunately the same cannot be said of his sisters. Out of the four Ladies Duff, three have fled from their lawful spouses with other men. The eldest, Lady Anne, married the Marquis of Townshend, who married the Marquis of Townshend, who was devoted to her, but a few years ago she eloped with a painted-up old roue. Lord Edward Thynne. Lord Townshend met Lord Edward soon after in Piccadilly, knocked the old sinner's faise teeth down his throat and nearly choked him, and forgave his wife, with whom he is now living happily. Adrian Hope, one of the richest and best-looking partis of the day. But she was soon divorced and married a man named Wilson.

The fourth sister, Lady Agnes, married the notorious Lord Dupplin, and five years afterward eloped with Herbert Flower. Lord Dupplin got a divorce in the Scotch courts and Flower married the divorcee on the understanding that they should part at the church doors. Flower died soon afterward and Lady Agnes married Alfred Cooper, the surgeon.

So altogether Princess Louise will not So altogether Princess Louise will hot have a very desirable lot of sisters-in-law.

The princess is not a beauty. She is very quiet and unattractive in every way. The Princess of Wales, who hates the idea of becoming old and manages to hide the wear of time more artfully than any woman in Europe, has always kept her daughters in the background so that Princess Louise may develop some talent when she has escaped from Marlborough House and Sandringham.

for intellectual attainments as has been given to Maria Mitchell in the week following her death. The press throughout the country has paid her deserved tribute and from other sources have come evidences of the widespread appreciation in which she was held by persons capable of realizing the extent and value of her ardu-ous labors. In her the world has lost a great student and the stars a devoted gazer. Those whose memory reaches back a couple of generations well recollect the prejudices that obstructed the path of woman's struggles for a larger sphere of usefulness. Forty years ago, though Miss Mitchell had already become famous among the leading astronomers of the among the leading astronomers of the world as a mathematician and discoverer, conservatism still doggedly maintained that as a scientific and intellectual competitor with man woman was a failure. The Scriptures were appealed to to prove that the Almighty had thus ordained it, and all the Almighty had thus ordained it, and all the canons of recognized propriety were cited to show that woman should keep slience in great affairs. At the world's anti-slavery convention in London Lucretia Mott, the distinguished Quakeress, who had been duly appointed an American delegate, was ordered from the floor of the house into the galleries, and Wendell Phillips, after defending her right as a human being to 8 ea's and vote for the slave, rose from his seat with lofty manhood and escorted her into the galleries, refusing to take further part in the preceedings.

In later years, when the advocates of a fair and open field for women were hewing away at the thick brushwood of prejudice, they always pointed with pride to Maria Mitcheil as a fiving rebuke to those who held that the female brain was unequal to the pursuits of scientific literature. Nor could the least touch of the undue masculine quality be ascribed to her, for in her simple Ouaker garb she was all sweetness

A Beauty With an Appetite. New York Sun: She had the pink and white beauty usually discerned in angels and in dolls about holiday time. She looked an angel when she was in repose, but the manner in which she disposed of her soup was evidence enough that she was not needed-just at present. her soup was evidence enough that she was an everyday girl. The young man who sat opposite to her in Delmonico's was growing a little tired of her. It was clear that the beauty of her face had won her the pleasure of dining in such a place. He tried to engage her in conversation, but they had nothing in common except perhaps their fondness for soup, and he had relapsed into a forced silence.

"Isn't this soup beautiful?" she suddenly asked.

Royalty was offended at the refusal.
This is why the Prince of Wales and his family started off to Paris on the eve of the Portiand wedding, and this is why the Queen omitted to send even her customary present of an Indian shawl to the bride of her Master of the Horse.

The Prince of Wales promptly arranged the betrothal with Lord Fife, in order to resent the snubbing he had received from Lord Fife is forty years old and the Princess twenty-two. were sentenced for crime and to the disparite of the punishment. In the first case a boundary of another woman was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and the London News expresses sympathy for the "unfortunate" creature. The other case was that of a poor woman, whose husband was that of a poor woman, whose husband was sick and who had six children dependent upon her. There being no food in the house and no prospect of procuring any, the mother, rather than see her little ones suffer, stole three silk handkerchiefs, worth 6 shillings, and sold them to buy bread. She was promptly arrested and sent to prison for five years, and none of the papers have yet found time to sympathize with her hard lot. Evidently property rights are much higher prized in England than human life.
